COMMENTS:

Tori says: So things have been pretty hectic around here and we got behind again. Good thing is that Reese is helping me find great music. That White Lightning song was one of his so it's a pick this week. I've been busy working on the NAACP annual Freedom Awards Breakfast which is our biggest event of the year. We actually sold out of tickets last month but I printed up enough for five more tables and we figured out a way to squeeze them in. Our keynote speaker was Pastor Zethelyn Johnson who dropped knowledge and inspiration. She reminded us that Ninety Million Registered Voters Nationwide Did Not Vote In The Last Election. We were also very lucky to have Anthony Daniels share with us. He is Alabama's House Democratic Chair (the youngest ever House Minority Chair as well as the first African American ever to hold that post). He also inspired and informed us about what's at stake in the upcoming mid-term elections. Over 700K Alabamians don't seem to realize how important their votes are. But, as has been said, we can't lecture folks. We must inspire and give them a reason to want to vote. That's our job over the next few weeks. Hope you are all helping with that. Get your people to the polls! Tori
